

Who won the Cuban Missile Crisis?

In my opinion both sides won

1. How I was able to come to this conclusion for how both sides won was how close the world was to having Nuclear Warfare. Obviously, Kennedy nor Khrushchev wanted this to happen so they came to the agreement of if the USA did not invade Cuba the USSR would remove its missiles. This was a mutual agreement and in the end no country was bombed or harmed in anyway. This being said it shows how both sides were winners.

2. The consequences of the Cuban Missile Crisis was the way Kennedy handle the situation on the edge of nuclear war. This was risky of Kennedy planning on increasing his reputation, but in a very dangerous way. Also, was the US deciding to overthrow Castro in the Bay of Pigs Invasion. This invasion happened because of Castro nationalizing American owned factories. Cuba realizing that they could not beat USA with force, they turned to Russia asking for help. This would lead to Russia giving Cuba missile that would eventually be pointed at the US. Cuba would sign a sugar deal with Russia, making it appear as the countries were allies. America seeing this was try to overthrow Castro, putting the world in danger of a nuclear war.
